

View of San Francisco Coast "Black Point"

By Albert Bierstadt This rare view of the rugged San Francisco coast depicts the area known as Black Point. This area, once a west coast Civil war fortification, is now the area of Upper Fort Mason in the Marina area of San Francisco. It was named Black Point because of the dark laurel trees that grow along the bluff. It is exquisite works such as this that laid the foundation for the American Impressionist period that followed. $95,000 31w X 24h, Arader Galleries

The Archeology of Wine #2

By Dan Shogren. Digging deep at Freemark Abbey Winery, in Napa Valley, Dan Shogren shows us unique views of the old stone winery and the making of fine wines. Traditional images become a modern statement through the Artist's eye. $1,600 per fine art giclee print on canvas 24w x 36h, unstretched. Available 2-4 weeks from order. ArtePieces

Marseilles Screen

By Raymond Goins

Beautiful verre eglomise screen features original art by Raymond Goins. Reverse painted by hand depicting a stylized scenic of the Amazon, then silvered for reflective light as a background for the sky and water. Handsome and flawless color combinations are revealed in sages, soft aquas and umbers. Frame is solid wood, hand glazed. Inlaid gilt divisions between panels. Inquire to find out more about the verre eglomise process. $16,140 Premiere Designers

Who will stand?

By Sharon Booma Oil on board 42x42x6 in $12,000 Caldwell Snyder

