What does it take to be the best? Raymond Goins will tell you it takes hard work, determination and persistence. It is no surprise considering the growing demand for Raymond's furniture design and consulting services. The distinctive qualities of R.L. Goins have not gone unnoticed. Raymond's reputation for having a sharp eye for design and color has made R.L. Goins increasingly popular.

Raymond opened R.L. Goins in 1996, offering antique restorations and painted finishes. Clients immediately noticed his propensity for making everything "gorgeous." Raymond insisted on every project being thoroughly researched to ensure authenticity. His inspiration from research of 17th, 18th, and 19th century European furniture and finishes allowed the development of his design style and finishing processes. Influenced by the great designers of the past such as Henri Jansen, Raymond's furniture design and finishes are unique and original to R.L. Goins. Due to Raymonds' progressive and innovative techniques and design, his furniture and accessories have become easily distinguishable as being "unmistakably R.L. Goins."

Raymond believes in the benefits of teamwork and integrity. As such, he surrounds himself with an "assemblage of all the best talents." His growing staff of designers, artists, finishers and woodworkers is brimming with excitement for the upcoming season. With the release of several new design prototypes, this year promises great successes for R.L. Goins. Represented in showrooms around the country, Raymond's furniture graces clients' homes from San Francisco to New York. Locally, his furniture is represented by Holland and Company at ADAC and MacRae showrooms. Local and national recognition aside, Raymond admits that the greatest sense of accomplishment comes from clients' positive feedback, believing that there is no better measure of success.
